

SINGER PALACE
HOTEL

*The Singer Palace
A tailor made experience in the heart of Rome*

In 1850 Mr. Singer, the famous American entrepreneur in the field of textile, invented the Sewing machine, the one that is still most famous to this day.

This innovative tool arrived in Italy in 1930, more precisely in this very building, where tailors would dress all the most elegant ladies! The Haute Couture tailors were all clients of Mr. Singer and the Singer Palace was an incredible showroom for sewing machines of all kinds and became the hot spot for Italian fashion. In the following years the Singer Palace changed use, but always kept its original charm and mirrored its central location. Uniquely the location sheltered an interesting collection of sewing machines, very rare to find at present time.

In 2018 the Visocchi Family reconverted the Singer Palace into a chic boutique hotel, adding a contemporary touch to the historic location. The marriage of ancient and modern can only complement the breathtaking panorama, for the delight of the discerning international clientele.
